ALEXANDRIA.

Alexandria is preparing for Christmas 'rom the north pole of northwest Alexandria to the south pole at the dyke beyond new Alexandria. Along the equator of King street every fruit and flower which can grow on a Christmas tree is blossoming if they do not equal those of Washington, give an idea, at least, of what people may expect when they cross the river and catch a sight of Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street. Trade is very fair, charity is abundant, and a boom of follity has begun, so that whatever may happen in the future angel of death has made many Alexandria households desolate. As already stated in The Star, Mrs. Judith P. Price and Miss Julia McGraw died on Sunday, Mr. Julian T Young who formerly carried on a hat store in this city, died yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Walter Brissey died yesterday at his home on Henry street. The remains of James T. Davis, the son of Capt. Joe Davis of this city, reached here this morning from Norfolk, and the funeral moved from the steamer to the tomb. Miss Julia Mcraw was buried this afternoon, and short-after her funeral the remains of Walter sey were committed to the tomb.

Something new in the way of a guessing contest combined with a social reunion and dancing party occurred at the residence of Mr. J. F. Rhine at Clifton Park last Wednesday evening. The invitations sent out called for a meeting of the numerous friends and acquaintances of the family, to collect at Mr. Rhine's hospitable dwelling for an evening's enjoyment, and was termed "a guessing party." A smail glass jar filled with peas was placed before the company who were invited to guess the number contained therein, the incentive being a prize considered of some importance in country life, viz., a pair of porkines. During the evening vocal solos were rendered by Miss Donelson and Miss Rhine, dancing following, succeeded by refreshments. At a late hour, after the table was cleared, the guessing was done, and Mr. William Clark was the fortunate one, who came nearest in his estimate of the number of peas in the jar, his guess being 1.201, winning the prize.

PICTURES OF AMERICAN SCENERY, BY CHARLEN LANMAN.

TO BE SOLD AT PUBLIC AUCTION WITHIN OUR SALES ROOMS, 1407 G STREET, TUES.
DAY AND WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER NINE TEENTH AND TWENTIETH, 1893, AT ELEVEN O'CLOCK A.M. EACH DAY.

EXHIBITION ALL DAY MONDAY, 18TH INST. This is a collection of Mr. Lanman's popular productions, similar in character to those which has been sending out to his patrons for several years, arranged in portfolios. They are taken directly from nature, executed in oil colors and mounted upon heavy card board so that they may be framed according to the taste of purchasers. The scenes depicted by the author-artist are exceedingly various, and as he is so well known in the metropolis we only deem it necessary, in this announcement, to refer our patrons to notices of the press and the catalogue, which is now ready.
